Comment: In Atlanta, we began experiencing the latest round of power interruptions around the Christmas holiday (2017). Since there was not an employee of Atlanta Power Co. available to maintain the power plant or to restore our electricity. A couple of other residents and I assumed some responsibility and were able to get the power restored. For two months, Gene Haught and I worked to maintain the turbine and the generator (as well as the town's backup diesel generator) so that Atlanta would not be without electricity. During this 10 week period, we were unable to contact Mr. Ray or a responsible company representative. Meanwhile, we continue to receive our monthly bills and we continue to pay for our electricity. After living in Atlanta for the past 11 years, and experiencing many power interruptions, of varying durations, I believe that it's time to support a new owner for Atlanta Power Co.
