Comment description: Dear Sirs,

I strongly urge you to accept Cassia Gulch Wind Park and Cassia Wind Farm project. Mr. Grover has done his homework, he has been compiling data for quite some time now and there is obviously no reason to delay him any further. This can only improve and enhance Idaho. Let's face it, wind is one of our best resources. We should use it if we can and Mr. Grover has had the foresight to do so. Impeding him any further would be economically, conservationally, and morally wrong.

Sincerely,

Liberty Cheney, consumer

I am in favor of granting Jared Grover the permission to go ahead with his wind turbine project. There is no clear evidence why he should be forced to wait for Idaho Power to conclude their study. We all know that wind power is a clean, viable energy resource that should be used.

Thank you,

Bob Bloxham

Comment_description: As residents of Gooding we watched with great interest the wind farm that went up on Bell Rapids and it has recently come to our attention that this project (Cassia Gulch Park and Cassia Wind Farm) was open to public comment. My husband and I whole heartedly support wind farms and would like to see this project go forward in a timely manner. We are fortunate in Idaho to have water and wind power available to us and we value the clean air here and hope to see more such projects. Thank you for allowing us to have a voice in this matter. Sincerely, John N. and Deby Infanger

Comment_description: I offer this comment of support for wind farming in general, but specifically in regards to Cassia Wind Farm and Cassia Gulch Wind Park. These projects are of great interest to local farmers. I believe that long term wind power contracts will help stabilize the rates that seem to increase year after year. Having researched this topic, it is my understanding that wind-produced power does not cost any more than the standard methods that Idaho Power is using. It seems smart to be more diverse and think toward the future. The added tax revenue for the counties where these and other projects are placed, would help many organizations. Thank you for your time.
