Please describe your comment briefly:

In this time of economic uncertainty, when so many people are struggling just to keep their heads above water, adding an extra financial burden (no matter how small) just adds to their hardship. I'd prefer to see this matter re-visited once the economy has improved and Idaho's 9.5 percent unemployment rate (29th highest unemployment rate in the nation as of Feb. 2010) drops to a reasonable level.

Thank you allowing me to comment on this matter.

Please describe your comment briefly:

I support Idaho Power's participation in the Northwest Energy Efficiency Alliance (NEEA). NEEA provides an excellent regional network of expertise in the ever-more important 'green economy,' which for Idaho specifically includes the exceptional work of the University of Idaho's Intergrated Design Lab (IDL). IDL represents one of Idaho's critical connections to the green/sustainable building industry. The technologies used by the IDL will most likely become ever more important to our state's economic development and it is very important that preserve their expertise within the state. Without NEEA, and Idaho Power's support of it, we may lose IDL.
