

3. While ICEA is a registered non-profit corporation in Idaho, it has not yet received tax-exempt Section 501 status from the Internal Revenue Service, although it has made application. Until it has received a tax-exempt determination, ICEA's ability to solicit contributions to support its work is hampered by the non-deductibility of contributions.
4. At the time ICEA retained McDevitt & Miller to provide legal representation in this matter, ICEA had cash on hand of $1,000. During the course of the proceeding ICEA was able to raise an additional $3,000 and a total of $4,000 has been paid to McDevitt & Miller. This amount may be deducted from the amount of an intervenor funding award otherwise considered to be reasonable by the Commission.
5. As time goes on, ICEA plans to undertake fund raising efforts so as to eliminate or reduce its need to rely on intervenor funding. An award of funding in this case would assist that effort by signaling that the Commission found ICEA's advocacy to be useful to its deliberations.
6. ICEA is not seeking intervenor funding for the time expended by witnesses White and Dunay.
7. For the foregoing reasons the costs incurred by ICEA constitute a significant financial hardship for ICEA.

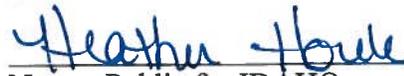

Dated this 17th day of June, 2013.
