Comment: I find it deeply concerning that Idaho Power was allowed to dictate terms to the State of Idaho limiting the growth and development of solar power. The closed door dealings cast shadows on the officials involved. The decision to cripple affordable solar development for the average householder and for industry leaves Idahoans in the technological Middle Ages, vulnerable to dirty fracking scams.

Comment: Trying to up-grade aging coal fired power generating plants instead of investing in renewable power sources or at least converting to gas fired generated power seems to be a short term "solution" to maintain shareholder profits at the expense to the environment and to longer term system and profit improvement.

Our environment cannot tolerate this sort of short term "solution" to a global problem even if shareholders and ratepayers have to forgo short term negative changes.

Thank you for your attention to public input.
