Idaho Power seeks decrease in monthly efficiency rider, and to refund $13 million in surplus rider funds

BOISE (January 20, 2017) – The Idaho Public Utilities Commission is accepting petitions to intervene through Feb. 1 on an Idaho Power Company application to reduce a rider customers pay to fund energy efficiency programs from the current 4 percent of monthly billed amounts to 3.75 percent.

Revenue raised from the rider must to go to fund energy efficiency and demand reduction programs. In recent years, the rider has been collecting more than what Idaho Power spends on the efficiency programs. Idaho Power further proposes to include a $13 million refund to customers as part of the annual June 1 Power Cost Adjustment (PCA). Finally, Idaho Power proposes to eliminate the annual transfer of $4 million in Energy Efficiency Rider funds to the PCA.

The impact of reducing the rider is only about 22 cents per month for the average residential customer who uses 1,000 kilowatt-hours per month, but the $13 million refund to customers as part of the PCA could reduce the size of a potential PCA increase or, conversely, could increase the size of the credit if the annual PCA is a reduction.

The rider collects about $40 million per year. Idaho Power claims there was an approximate $9 million surplus in the rider account at the end of 2016.

Interested parties file petitions to intervene to provide testimony, exhibits and cross-examine witnesses. Later the commission will announce dates for customers to provide comment.
