Comment: Net metering is a win-win for Idaho citizens economically, and the state of Idaho environmentally. The energy that Idaho residents save by solarizing is THEIR energy, not Idaho Power's. THEY generated it, not Idaho Power. It makes no sense that Idaho Power feels entitled to purloin this energy, when it has the capability to resell it and return to customers the money that they have saved IP by generating this power. That seems like the type of ethically unconscionable behavior that a unregulated monopoly might exhibit in direct opposition to the public interest.

I am relieved that the Idaho PUC is the watchdog for this type of bad behavior, which is against the public interest, both economically and environmentally.
