Comment: Since the weather was warmer this winter and our power bills were less than other years, so now Rocky Mountain Power need a rate increase to make up for residents having lower heating bills? The notice that came in the last bill was not recieved until the end of Feb which only gives at most 2 weeks comment time on their rate increase. Now since fuel prices have come down, should they be asking for another rate increase for increased fuel costs? Also I believe they give away too much money in grants. Why should we have to get a rate increase when money from Rocky Mountain Power goes to pay for color brochures every month and give aways for different grants?
