To The Idaho Public Utility Commission:

As an Idaho economic development corporation, the Bannock Development Corporation supports Idaho Power's request to shorten the length of guaranteed contracts for large solar and wind generation projects. I believe Idaho Power's request is in the best interests of Idaho Power business customers because it will keep power rates low.

Low power costs are one of Idaho's top attractions for industrial recruitment, retention and expansion and associated good paying jobs. Having access to reliable electricity at a fair price is essential to good job creation in Idaho. It's also essential to the financial health of our citizens, who range from individuals living on fixed incomes to major industrial accounts.

The Directors of the Bannock Development Corporation love and respect the clean environment that's essential to our way of life in Idaho and the Northwest. All of us want clean energy, and we are glad to know that a majority of our electricity comes from the region's clean, renewable hydro resources.

Our state cannot sacrifice power reliability and affordability to exchange our current clean energy for another form. The Bannock Development Corporation believes Idaho Power recognizes and understands this, and works hard to strike a good balance. The Bannock Development Corporation recognizes the company's efforts to keep power costs in line with current market rates, which will benefit Idaho companies and create jobs for its citizens.

We don't believe Idaho Power should be required to buy electricity it does not need, especially from sources that decrease the reliability of its service while pushing costs up.

If Idaho Power continues to be required to make such purchases, we agree that contracts should be limited to two years, as the company has requested, or less, rather than locking in prices for 20 years.

The Bannock Development Corporation supports Idaho Power's environmentally responsible and balanced service and its tradition of providing quality, reliable service at a low cost. This is key to The Bannock Development Corporation and it's good for Idaho. We ask that you grant Idaho Power's petition to modify the terms and conditions of future PURPA energy sales agreements (IPC-E-15-01).

Thank you,

John G. Regetz
Executive Director
