Comment_description: I am a Qwest employee and have seen all the changes in the telephone industry since the break-up of the Bell System. Many changes have been good and some not so good. I favor deleregulation of Qwest for many reasons. As a consumer, if Qwest could compete with other telephone companies, it would be in the consumer's best interest. Qwest could offer package deals for basis service, calling areas packages including long distance packages as the cell phone companies offer. I have a young son that lives in an apartment with others and they use a cell phone versus a land line due to the expense and variety of uses with a cell phone, however; they have had to compromise the use of a land line for the internet. As an employee, the cell phone industry and independent companies are "killing" our business because we are not able to compete at their rates and services and we indeed have the best info-structure to service the public. Qwest has "trimmed the fat" and reduced work forces in every aspect of the business and still not able to compete, due to regulations.

Please consider most of all, the best product for the consumer and next giving the ability for a great company to compete in a very competitive world.

I am a Qwest employee and I am writing in support of Qwest's request to deregulate local service. I believe that deregulation will promote competition and new technology. I also believe that the market will regulate prices. The reality is that wireless telephony is in direct competition with land lines yet has none of the same regulatory restrictions applicable to traditional telephony. S. Davidson
